"Don't you think Mr. Kennedy minds the children while Mrs. Kennedy does her shopping?"

Store Manager Contrasts Today's Luncheonette With Store's First

The new Woolworth Luncheonette in the Del Amo Shopping Center, has "come a long way" since the company opened the first one back in 1910. The original luncheonette in Woolworth's 14th Street store in New York was "just a small back room selling hot dogs and root beer to several hundred persons yearly."

In contrast, the Del Amo Center luncheonette is designed in the latest style, equipped with the most modern conveniences, can accommodate 42 and is geared to serve thousands yearly, according to L. H. Roberts, manager of the Del Amo Woolworth store.

WOOLWORTH'S food facilities have grown until now the company has 1783 luncheonettes and 19 in-store and separate cafeterias in all 50 states serving an average of 750,000 persons daily in 1960, Roberts said.

"This makes Woolworth's the world's largest commercial dispenser of food prepared and served on the premises. Its restaurant volume is exceeded only by that of the Armed Forces," Roberts added.

THE REASON for this acceptance of Woolworth meals, Roberts pointed out, is its wide variety — five to seven different entrees available daily in stores to fifteen in cafeterias, that range from steak to fish and include full course dinners.

Also responsible for the growth of the company's food operation is the care the company takes in preparation of its menus. Every dish is put through numerous tests and tastings in Woolworth's laboratories and kitchens in New York so when it goes out to stores and cafeterias the local chefs have instructions "down to a grain of salt" on preparation and serving.

Army Pvt. Samuel J. Leto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Leto, 16510 Purche Ave., completed eight weeks of military police training at The Provost Marshal General's School, Fort Gordon, Ga., June 2.

Leto received instruction in self defense, traffic control and basic procedures of civil and military law.

He entered the Army last January and received basic training at Fort Ord, Calif.

The 17-year-old soldier attended North High School.

Increase Cited In Employment, Unemployment

Total employment in the Los Angeles metropolitan area based on a newly revised employment series, rose by 14,900 between April and May, and reached 2,747,200, Irving H. Perless, director of employment, reported yesterday. Unemployment in the two-county area, however, also showed a moderate increase during the month.

Seasonal expansion among the manufacturing industries dominated the April-to-May employment upturn, with particularly active hiring reported in trade and construction. The principal gain in manufacturing resulted from the recall of automobile workers following temporary production shutdowns, but supplemental factory employment increases were fairly widespread.

Continuation of the long-term retrenchment in aircraft, however, produced the outstanding development of the period as the industry gave up its traditional position as the top-ranking manufacturing industry in the area. Employment in electrical machinery, including electronics, edged ahead of that in aircraft. The overall employment total of 2,747,200 was up from the 2,727,300 reported last May by the narrow margin of 19,900 workers.

Unemployment rose from 203,100 in April to 205,900 in May as compared to 148,300 a year ago. The jobless rate moved up from 6.9 to 7.0 percent in the past month. The rate last May was 5.2 percent.
